This edition of the Kaleidoscope is a little behind schedule. Surprised? Of course not, since Hampden-Sydney's yearbook never comes out when it should. With the exception of the 1994 book, not a single edition has come out on time in at least the past seven years. When I say "on time," I do not mean that copies are waiting for the returning underclassmen; rather, I'm referring to books that were published less than a year later than other schools. For example, 1994 and 1995 saw the arrival of the 1990 and 1991 editions, respectively.

If they can't seem to be produced on time, then what is the point of the College supporting the yearbook? This question was posed to me by the Student Finance Board, who attempted to axe the Kaleidoscope from the Activities budget entirely for the 1994-95 school year. It seems feasible, especially with the many clubs on campus who are in dire need of funds (such as the Outsider's Club, which I'm sure needs a few more canoes). If for nothing else, the Kaleidoscope should be kept for one reason: it is the most useful and most comprehensive record of the college year. In On This Hill, John Brinkley cites the Kaleidoscope as one of the most important sources of information on the College, and it is referred to many times in the text. In addition, the Kaleidoscope is the most permanent record of college activities; although The Tiger and The Record alumni magazine both serve in this capacity, copies of the paper end up in recycling bins as quickly as they are printed, and The Record follows soon after. On the other hand, copies of the Kaleidoscope will be around for decades, if not longer. I doubt that I am alone in thinking that a school so deeply rooted in history would be at a great loss if the Kaleidoscope were to stop being produced.

It's a miracle this book even got published. Rather than being able to work with the $25,000 usually allotted to the annual, we were limited to a meager budget of $15,000. This money, coupled with donations and revenue from ad sales, was barely enough to keep us in the black. As a result, the book that you now hold in your hand may be a little less impressive than what you expected. This edition is 55 pages less than last year's and color pages had to be omitted for lack of funds. To be honest, we couldn't even afford to print enough copies of this book for each student.

Though it may not have all of the bells and whistles of other books, I've been very pleased with it. The 1995 Kaleidoscope has won numerous awards for its design and theme, before it has even been completed. I'm probably a little biased, but I feel confident in saying that this is one of the best-looking annuals in America. Most importantly, though, is the fact that it got published, in spite of its detractors. It's good to know that the history of H-SC has been preserved for at least another year, and here's hoping that it will continue to do so.

Lt. Col. Oliver North, in reference to the controversy surrounding his role in the Iran-Contra Affair

THE EYES OF VIRGINIA and the rest of the nation were focused upon Hampden-Sydney on Tuesday, September 6, 1994 as the College hosted a debate between the four candidates in Virginia's Senate race. The debate was the third of the Senate race; candidates Marshall Coleman, Oliver North, Chuck Robb, and Douglas Wilder had all previously appeared on CNN's "Larry King Live" and in an untelevised second debate took place at the Homestead resort.

A noisy percentage of the crowd seemed strongly in favor of candidate North. Chants of "Ol-lie!" resonated through Kirby Field House as North supporters showed their support for the "Co-Founder of Guardian Technologies." Only President Wilson's request for silence was able to keep the North backers from further demonstration.

The candidates were given two minutes each to field a question (all of which were submitted by Hampden-Sydney students, staff, and community members) concerning domestic policy, foreign policy, or character issues. Ms. Judy Woodruff, co-host of CNN's "Politics Today," served as moderator for the debate.

The debate opened with a lively discussion of each candidate's views of foreign policy, with great emphasis on the possibility of a preemptive strike against North Korea and on the refugee situation in Haiti. Chuck Robb was the only candidate to say that he would not favor a preemptive strike on North Korea, because any strike now would only destroy future capacity to produce nuclear weapons. All three other candi-

Robb also disagreed with the other candidates by favoring an invasion of Haiti, feeling that it is the duty of the U.S. to foster democracy, and that the administration had already drawn a line which the military in Haiti has crossed. None of the other candidates felt that Haiti was enough of a threat to security to justify an invasion.

ON DOMESTIC ISSUES, each candidate faced questions pertaining to the problems of the deficit and entitlements, crime, and vouchers for private schooling.

Senator Robb said that he saw the need to raise taxes as well as cut spending, including entitlements such as social security, in order to lower the deficit. He was so willing to lower the nation's debt that he even went as far as to say that he would "take food from the mouths of widows and orphans" if he had to in order to cut spending. Former governor Wilder attacked Robb's record of voting for tax increases under both the Bush and Clinton administrations, stating that he would not be in favor of any bill which would increase spending by the nation. Although both North and Coleman also felt that budgetary cuts were in order for the nation, they both disagreed with their fellow candidates by saying that social security should be kept as it is, with North stating that people had been promised to get a piece of their funds back when they retire.

On the issue of crime, Coleman was in favor of keeping the death penalty; he felt that it is the expression of the public's moral outrage. He stated that the only thing that has failed is the justice system, dates strongly disagreed, with Coleman and North both stating that they would support such a strike but that it would be impossible with such a small military presence in South Korea.

which has not lived up to its responsibility. Robb felt that the death penalty has not been a good deterrent to crime since crime has gone up since its reinstatement. He said, "We must look to the root cause of crime, and try to prevent it." North's view on the crime problem is that parole should be done away and more money should go to the state level to combat crime. Douglas Wilder attacked the recently passed Crime Bill for not giving money to the states where the crimes were being committed.

Speaking on the issue of vouchers for alternative schooling, North felt that some public schools don't work, and vouchers would allow the poor to be able to afford a better education. Coleman also favored tax credit and vouchers for people who wish to send their children to private school, since the money would not be needed to educate them in public school. Both Robb and Wilder felt that any voucher programs for alternative schooling would simply be another burden on an already enlarged deficit.

On the character issue, each candidate had to explain why the voters should trust them to represent them in Congress. North, who has been criticized by many people for his role in the Iran-Contra Affair, defended himself by stating that everyone makes mistakes, but that he made his mistakes in order to save lives. He said that his action was part of a commitment by the Reagan administration to help the Contras and rescue hostages and that he was only doing what he felt was his duty. Marshall Coleman defended his wavering stances on the abortion issue by stating that his views had never changed. He said that he had always been personally opposed to abortion, but that he feels that the government should stay out of this issue altogether.

Wilder, who has often been attacked for promising not to run for the Presidency and the Senate seat but running for both offices, denied making such promises and said that he felt that a person should be able to change his or her mind about whether to run or not. Robb, who has fought allegations in recent years of drug use and marital infidelity, denied any such use of illegal substances, and stated that his wife has forgiven him for all past action.

The candidates took shots at each other and became involved in shouting matches. Coleman, who seemed the most prepared, did very well in explaining the issues. Unfortunately, he lacked the dynamic personality of his fellow candidates. Unfortunately for Coleman, his supporters were not to be found at the debate.

Wilder, with his great one-liners, seemed to have stolen the show. His attacks on Robb inflicted a great deal of damage on the senator, and it seems that Wilder will be picking up a great deal of the former Robb vote. Wilder supporters were very happy about the result of the debate, and they view him as a serious contender against North.

Robb seemed to have lost the whole election on this one debate alone. Assailed from all sides, he demonstrated that he was not up to the task and simply lost his composure. After the debate, even his supporters had to admit that their candidate was in trouble.

North, who came into the debate as the favorite, did not overwhelm the other candidates, but still achieved what he wanted to. While North did well enough to answer his critics so that the debate did not hurt him, he did not make quite the showing that many expected. With Coleman and Wilder both attacking Robb for much of the debate, North basically sat back and reaped the profits of Robb's poor showing. North supporters admit that Coleman and Wilder did better than North, but the net effect was to make North's lead grow.

SMOKE IN THE WIND

THE ALAMO IS GONE

By EUNICE CARWILE '92

DEMOLITION OF THE Alamo began on June 7, not with the crashing blow of a wrecking ball, but with a dry crunch as the crane's giant clam-shell shovel took a bite of the chimney.

There was no drama—not even the grim satisfaction akin to what little boys must derive from smacking down their towers of blocks. The building did not implode, but was eaten away, bite by bite, the ball pulverizing the inside and the shovel gobbling from the outside.

From the small clutch of people standing nearby rose not a gasp but a sigh. The destruction of the College's oldest building came almost as an anticlimax to its history.

The Alamo's two wings were built in 1817 and 1822, the earlier part as a house for the vice-president of the College. In 1822, when Cushing Hall was begun, the front (eastern) half was added, and the building became the Steward's Hall. The Steward's family occupied the second floor, and students lived in the six full-sized attic rooms.

The building received its name from the fancied resemblance of its roofline to that of the Franciscan mission in Texas, the effect created in the 1870s when a square façade was added to the east end and a hurricane later blew down the upper corners of the false front.

Woodrow Wilson's father lived in the Alamo when he was professor of physical science from 1850 to 1855. (Once upon a time Hampden-Sydneyites swore that Woodrow Wilson was conceived in this building; sad to say, it is only myth.)

The Alamo served for many years as housing for Hampden-Sydney's preparatory division; for a while the ground floor rooms were used for the grammar school. At times until the 1920s, it was a privately-run dining club and a College-affiliated commons. It had been used since as a faculty residence and a dormitory.

In 1990, after students, staff, and faculty publicly and heatedly protested a plan to demolish the Alamo, the College's Trustees decided instead to "mothball" the badly maintained building and await funding to refurbish it.

However, an early morning fire on Friday, April 8, burnt the attic of the original structure. (Because there was no electrical service to the empty building, the fire was investigated as "suspicious" by the State Arson Board.) Architectural engineers declared the Alamo unsafe to approach, much less to work on; the building was also condemned on May 2 by the county's building inspector. After reviewing the reports of funds permitting, to create a "new" one on the same site, using original bricks, wooden beams, stairs, and other material salvaged from the old one.

Thus the Alamo came to be slowly chewed and then disgorged into a Mack truck on June 7, 1994.

After a while, the crowd broke up and drifted off. John Brinkley, the College's historian, remained. He stood for the duration, alone, watching the jaws open and close, the lintels and beams and fireplaces fall into the rubble, the splinters and mortar flying—and perhaps hearing ancient sighs and whispers in the dusty air.

The destruction of the College's oldest building came almost as an anticlimax to its history.

GRADUATION WITH THE GOVERNOR

"OUT OF THE CRUCIBLE OF CONFLICT AND COMPETITION"

By EUNICE CARWILE '92

FIFTY YEARS AFTER the end of World War II in Europe, the Honorable George Allen, Governor of Virginia, reminded Hampden-Sydney's graduates that American freedom is sustained by a less violent kind of conflict than warfare.

Recalling the discord between James Madison and Patrick Henry, early trustees of the College and founders of the nation, Governor Allen reminded the audience of more than 2,000 that out of such a "crucible of conflict and competition can come great things . . . In fact, competition of ideas and vigorous debate are the lifeblood of democracy."

American democracy is unique because of its demand for peaceful resolution of conflict. The nation's founders built "a healthy tension" into the Constitution by establishing a system of checks and balances. "The result," he said: "power is divided. Conflict becomes a force for good. Extremes are resisted. Peace and liberty are preserved."

In an ideal nation, conflict becomes competition—in the marketplace, in society, and in government, with most divisive issues resolved at the ballot box.

And, traditionally, Americans "have understood what united them far greater than what divided them."

Lately, however, political differences have turned into extremism, and extremism has turned into tragedy, said Governor Allen, only days after terrorists bombed a federal building in Oklahoma City. Now more than ever, he urged, "we must rediscover and rededicate ourselves to the timeless truths and enduring principles that for two centuries have steered us clear of [that kind of] barbarism."

Mr. Allen was elected the 67th Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia in 1993, thereby filling the seat first occupied by one of the founding Trustees of Hampden-Sydney College, Patrick Henry. A graduate of the University of Virginia (earning a B.A. in history in 1974 and a Juris Doctorate in 1977), he has served as a delegate to the General Assembly of Virginia and as a member of the United States House of Representatives. He was awarded a Doctor of Laws, honoris causa, by Hampden-Sydney College during commencement ceremonies.

CARPENTER Z: THE NEW KID ON THE BLOCK

BY AARON FOLDENAUER '98

THE LAST OF the series of Carpenter Houses, thanks to generous donations from the Carpenter Foundation, will be opening at the start of the 1995-96 Academic Year.

Carpenter Z is the new and improved living environment on campus and is designed to be a service building for the other two Carpenter houses. The building contains a laundry unit and video games available for public use. Plans call for the second floor of Carpenter Z to be self-governed, allowing the residents to address such issues as noise and the use of alcohol in the building. There is also an apartment in the basement of the building, which was designed originally to accommodate an Associate Dean of Resident Life, but since no one has been hired to that position, the College plans to rent it out for the time being.

Carpenter Z's boiler and chiller are sized to accommodate the new Alamo, so if the new Alamo is ever built, the main heating and air conditioning units will be the same ones used to control the climate in Carpenter Z. The new dormitory's climate control system is one that will allow for heating and cooling at the same time, while the other two Carpenter Houses—along with almost all other dormitories—can run only one or the other at any time. Carpenter Z's system, a four-pipe system, allows for quick changeovers from heating to cooling (while in the other Carpenter Houses the changeover takes about six hours, according to C. Norman Krueger, Vice President for Business Affairs and Treasurer) which is especially useful when it gets chilly at night but warms up quickly in the morning. Room temperatures and other vital statistics are monitored by Buildings and Grounds.

The new building complies with the Americans with Disabilities Act, has a wheelchair ramp, handicap-accessible bathrooms, and has special door handles that are easier to grab and turn. Because the carpet in the other two Carpenter buildings was so difficult to maintain, the floors in the hallways of Carpenter Z are made of tile while the rooms are equipped with carpet.

Additional ventilation and sound-dampening measures were implemented during the construction of Carpenter Z. The interior walls of the building are made of thick cinder blocks, each of which is filled with a sound-absorbing substance. Because of problems with paint peeling in the other two buildings' bathrooms, more-powerful ventilation fans have been installed in Z's bathrooms. In addition, the College increased the number of electrical outlets and substantially improved room lighting. Z will be the first dorm to have Ethernet computer access. A higher grade of windows that require less maintenance than the ones in the other two buildings was also installed.

Carpenter Z was built by R. E. Lee and Son, Inc., of Charlottesville and designed by Calloway, Johnson, and Moore, P.A., which also designed the other two Carpenter buildings as well as the Commons. The cost of Carpenter Z will total about 1.8 million dollars.

1995 KALIFORNIA SCOPE • VOLUME 99

IN THE DARK DAYS of Winter 1995 when the ice was falling, the wind was howling, and even the T-shirted lads racing from Venable to Morton were chilled to the bone, there came to Hampden-Sydney a breath of intellectual springtime. From the misty past, from Boeotian Thebes, King Oedipus, his eyes bloodied but his spirit unbroken, infused the campus with his greatness. The departments of Classics, Fine Arts, Philosophy, Psychology, English, Religion, and Political Science—in a remarkable cooperative effort—celebrated Sophocles' masterpiece, the Oedipus Rex. Through a six-week class, a three-day symposium, and a monumental production of the play, the eventful story of the Theban Prince was the focus of the campus's intellectual life. Students, faculty, and townspeople probed the beauty and truth of Greek tragedy—with all of its philosophical richness, its examinations of the profoundest human dilemmas, and its deep understanding of human sorrow.

OEDIPUS, SAVED!

H-SC RESURRECTS THEBAN KING

BY AARON FOLDENAUER '98

Every Tuesday night for six weeks, leading up to the March 1-4 production of the play on the stage of Johns Auditorium and to the March 1-3 symposium on the play, a class cross-listed as Classics/Fine Arts/Psychology 185 convened. Each ninety-minute session was divided into two parts. During the first half, all the students gathered in the large room in Gilmer Hall for a common lecture. In the first lecture on January 24, Professor of Classics James A. Arieti discussed the concept of tragedy and the Greek view of fate, foreknowledge, and free-will; on January 31, Professor of Theater David Kaye discussed the problems a modern director faces in presenting any play and the special problems in presenting an ancient play; on February 7, Professor of Philosophy Patrick A. Wilson spoke about four approaches to the problem of free-will; on February 14, Professor of Psychology Thomas E. DeWolfe discussed Freudian psychology and its relation to the Oedipus; and on February 21, Professor Karelisa Hartigan of the University of Florida delivered a lecture on the theatrical history of the Oedipus in America. In the second half of the class, the students met in small discussion sections with one of eleven professors. For the Hampden-Sydney professors, this was a labor of love: none received an extra penny for his work. The class was made available to students from both local high schools and from Longwood College, and a number of people enrolled from these schools.

The inter-disciplinary symposium on the Oedipus Rex featured prominent professors of Classics, Psychiatry, Psychology, and Fine Arts as well as leading professionals in theater.

"A symposium of this kind, with so rich a diversity of participation from so many fields, could take place only at a school like Hampden-Sydney," said Professor Arieti, one of the organizers of the "Oedipus Semester." "For only at a small college, where there is a collegial atmosphere, where we all see ourselves as toilers in a common field, could so many departments work together to organize this sort of event. And the very fact that so many students and professors were reading and thinking about the same play provided a fertile atmosphere for new ideas."

Dr. Patrick Wilson equated the entire Oedipus Symposium with last year's Vietnam Symposium, but, as he said, the Oedipus Symposium was "purely academic and intellectual, not political." The College's attention to Oedipus, however, was not limited to the production and the symposium. Dr. Wilson said that he and approximately eight other faculty members were reading the Oedipus Rex in Greek with Professor Arieti. In addition, Professor Arieti's Greek class read the play in the original language.

THE "OEDIPUS SEMESTER" also inspired the visual arts, for Professor David Lewis created a painting which became the poster and program cover for the play (his illustration was to win a national award in May). Four Hampden-Sydney students, led by Fine Arts Lecturer Pamela Fox, portrayed themes of the Oedipus in a series of photographs. These and drawings by Longwood College students were displayed for a month in Crawley Forum, marking the first occasion the two colleges have collaborated on a Fine Arts exhibit. "While we were designing the photographs, we learned how the

Professor David Kaye,

Sydney performance of Oedipus Rex

themes of the Oedipus Rex apply to everybody's life," Fox said.

Of all the Oedipus events, the performances of the play on the stage of Johns Auditorium attracted the most spectators, nearly 800, despite the occurrence of the NCAA basketball tournament on campus for two of the nights. The director of the Hampden-Sydney production, Professor David Kaye, used approximately twenty-two actors and actresses, two percussionists, and seven technicians, all of whom spent over twenty hours a week for seven weeks in preparing for the production. As further examples of the inter-disciplinary atmosphere at Hampden-Sydney, Professor of English Hassell Simpson played the role of the blind prophet, Tiresias, and Dr. James Kidd of the Fine Arts department composed the music. Dr. Allan Farrell, Professor of Modern Languages, translated Jean Cocteau's version of the play which Dr. William Anderson, Professor of Chemistry, directed as a radio broadcast for Hampden-Sydney's radio station, WWHS-FM.

Many challenges were involved in producing such a dynamic, insightful—and famous—play. Professor Kaye's primary hurdle in the Oedipus production was the fact that so many members of the audience had studied the play from cover to cover and that so many spectators had their own views on what the play is all about. "Every theme is fascinating, but we tried to uncover what the action of the play is," said Professor Kaye. "By presenting the play honestly, we left it to the audience to find out what the play means."

Professor Kaye thinks that those who imagined Greek plays as "stuffy and dull" came to see Oedipus and realized that, in fact, the play is "passionate, alive, and relevant." Although the actors in Kaye's production were not professionals, Dr. Simpson contends that Professor Kaye "led us amateur actors into doing professional things in spite of ourselves." H. Charles Hurt III, Student Body President at the time of the Oedipus

Semester," called Kaye's play "the most unsettling and provocative production I've seen this side of Broadway."

"As a community," Kaye said, "we journeyed back 2,500 years and brought the tragic king to life. Through the intense scrutiny of this symposium, my intellect was so stimulated and energized, I could not help but gain a sharpened focus into myself, and my world. Now, after the sets have been unceremoniously torn down, after the scholarly speakers have returned to their respective institutions, I sit back and reflect. As I contemplate, one thought races to the forefront of my mind: What can we tackle next?"

THE SYMPOSIUM brought together speakers from diverse backgrounds. The first speaker, Charles Segal, Professor of Greek and Latin at Harvard University, addressed with great sensitivity the problems of interpreting the play as a great work of literature. Subsequent speakers, Scott Shattuck, Producing Artistic Director of the Jean Cocteau Repertory Theater; Jack Welsh, Director of Theater Arts at the University of Richmond; Myra Lynn Daleng, from the Department of Dance at the University of Richmond; and Ted Davis, Director of the critically-acclaimed off-Broadway Production of Oedipus, addressed the problems that theater professionals have in producing an ancient work for modern audiences. Jules Bemporad, Professor of Clinical Psychiatry at Cornell University Medical College, and Ruthellen Lefkowitz Josselson, Professor of Psychology at Towson State University, examined the play as an inspiration to Sigmund Freud's psychoanalytical theory and as an example of an individual search for identity. Finally, Hampden-Sydney Professors James Kidd and Katherine Leake showed how Sophocles's play was an inspiration first to Igor Stravinsky in his Oedipus oratorio and to George Lucas in the Star Wars movies, thus making clear that despite the passage of two millennia, the Oedipus has lost none of its creative power.

As Professor Arieti often says, "We can recognize the great works of art only by the test of greatness first stated by Longinus: any work which has been praised by many people, in many times, in many lands." The "Oedipus Semester" showed quite gloriously that the study of greatness is thriving at Hampden-Sydney.

*"A symposium of this kind . . .
could take place
only at a school
like Hampden-Sydney."*

THETA CHI

AS USUAL, the sounds of construction work buzzed and hummed through the air at Hampden-Sydney this year. This time, the lucky recipient of a cosmetic makeover was the great home of History, Classics, Political Science, English, Philosophy, and Economics: Morton Hall.

Morton, before the renovation, had remained virtually untouched since its 1936 construction. It was the same for current Hampden-Sydney students as it had been for their fathers, and grandfathers before them. Unfortunately, however, change is a phenomenon that not even Morton Hall could withstand.

The primary exterior change to the building was the extension of its central facade forty feet eastward. Also notable on the outside was the construction of brick walls extending from the south end of the building to somewhat encase the building's new air condiover the years. Since 1994, building codes stated that the stairwell would have acted as a natural chimney in a fire; thus, they were removed. In their place two new stairwells were constructed in the addition. Also, like its counterpart Bagby Hall two years before, Morton received an elevator.

Other changes included the removal of the original classroom and office doors with the transoms that sat above them, replaced by new stained wooden doors with sealed windows above them. New exterior doors were also installed. After many complaints about the sealed windows in the renovation of Bagby, the College wisely opted to keep Morton's windows from being sealed, choosing instead windows with locks. Also, newly installed motion sensors turn classroom lights on and off automatically as students enter and vacate classrooms.

OF COURSE, the greatest inconvenience caused by the renovation was its late completion. The renovation was supposed to have been completed by the start of classes in late August. However, various delays over the summer led to Morton's being nowhere near ready by then. Thus, although some first-floor morning classes took place in Morton throughout the renovation, many classes traditionally held there had to find new homes. Rooms in Bagby, Eggleston, Winston, tioning unit. Unfortunately, these additions were far from complete when students returned to the hill in August of 1994. By the time final exams rolled around in December, Morton Hall had finally begun resemble itself once again.

Interior changes were drastic; the most notable was the removal of the grand central staircase which had been climbed by hundreds of Hampden-Sydney men and even Graham and Gammon Gymnasium adopted Morton classes. Political science and Economics classes took place in the old Tiger Inn. Meanwhile, Dr. Amos Lee Laine raved about the English from the chapel in College Church, and other Morton Hall veterans went about their tasks in new surroundings.

Reactions to the new Morton were mixed. The exterior changes did not seem to create much dissent, since they allowed the building to preserve its outer appearance sufficiently. As for the newly-brightened interior, some members of the Hampden-Sydney community mourned the demise of the old dark, almost-spooky aura that had lingered in the building for so long. Unfortunately, 1994 building materials also could not re-create some of the 1936 touches such as the mustard yellow tile walls, and attempts to do so led to inconsistencies throughout the building.

By the latter part of October, many professors were back home in their offices, and many classes were able to return to their traditional rooms. Although opinions do vary, we can all agree that it is nice to see life in Morton return to normal.

OPINIONS on the RENOVATIONS

H-SC Students and their two cents' worth.

"Although I feel they took too long, I do feel that the final product is satisfactory. I like the fact that the windows can be opened, unlike those in Bagby."

—DAVID CAMP '96

"I miss the old Morton; it had a certain charm that just got lost in the rebuilding."

—CHRISTOPHER LUCAS '98

"Morton? I haven't seen it yet, they don't let us out of Gilmer too often."

—TRIP WORDSWORTH '96
CHEM/BIO/PHYSICS MAJOR

"There are certain advantages to the new Morton, but, one has to wonder, as with so many so-called 'improvements' if it was really worth all the trouble."

—PROF. JOHN BRINKLEY

WWHS-FM

WWHS continued to broadcast from the old Carriage House on the FM frequency of 92.1. A staff of just under 40 disc jockeys kept WWHS alive with music programming encompassing a wide variety of musical formats, such as alternative and classic rock, rap, blues, classical, and jazz music. New to WWHS this year was the World Radio Network, made available with the installation of a new satellite receiver. The satellite programming ran during hours not consumed by live programming, offering the Hampden-Sydney community news and information from networks around the world.

WWHS also found new life this year as a source of information and special broadcasts pertaining to major campus events. To coincide with the Oedipus Symposium, the station produced and aired a live performance of the Jean Cocteau play "Machine of the Gods," as translated by Dr. Alan Farrell. Also, the station broadcast live information during the weekend of Greek Week, giving listeners information on safety, bands, and other pertinent information.

UPS

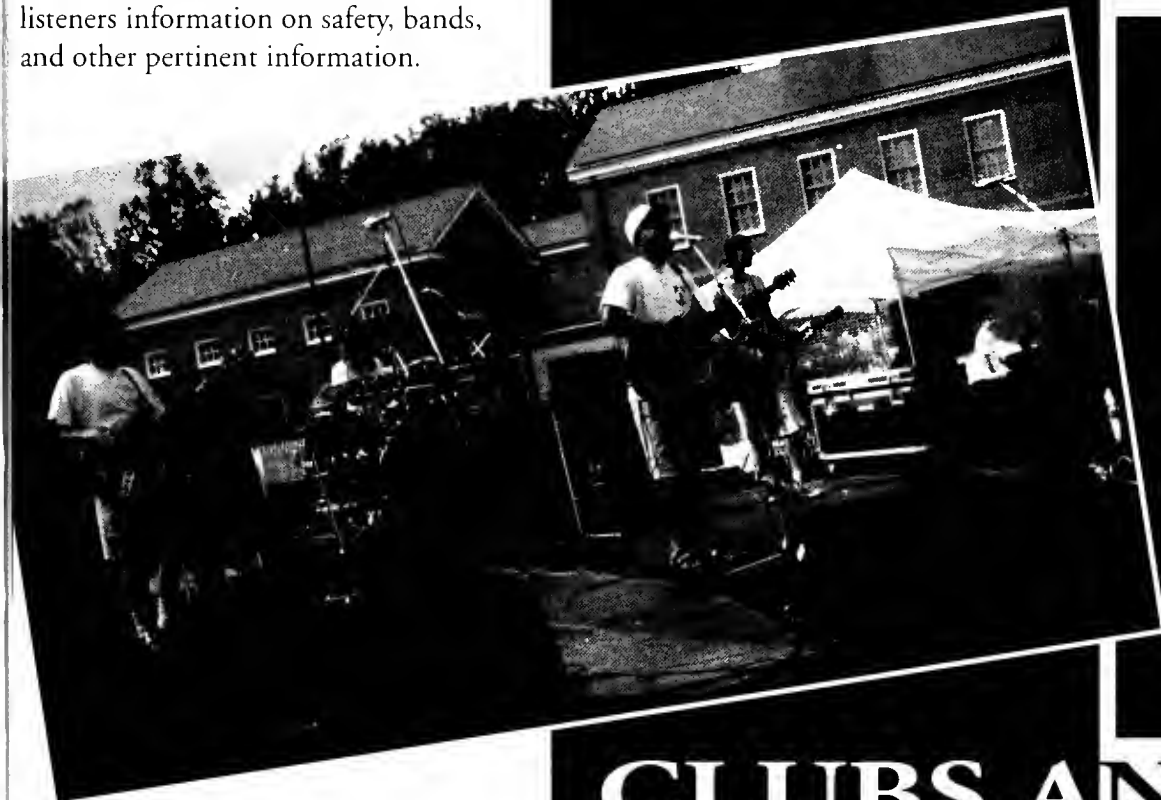

The Union Philanthropic Society, in maintaining its long tradition of debate, was very active in 1994-95. In addition to its weekly meetings, the society sponsored several programs, including a public debate on Sex, Pornography, and Feminism, in addition to a public lecture by Ambassador W. E. Jones. Another major activity for the Society was its annual Intermediate Celebration, which included a debate, dinner, and social event.

Additionally, the Society judged several local debate tournaments, and also built strong relationships with their counterpart organizations at several other schools, to whom the Society made visits. The Society also continued its annual debate with Randolph-Macon College, as part of the annual Macon Week festivities in November.

IVCF

The Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, an interdenominational group open to all students that is joined together based on a faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and personal Lord. This past year, IVCF had close to 25 Hampden-Sydney students active in the club, along with students from Longwood College, with whom we share our chapter. Members attended weekly group meetings, at which members listened to speakers ranging from the Reverend Rick Caldwell '87 to President Wilson, and smaller group meetings, at which trained students led their peers in a time of scripture study and fellowship.

The club participated in various retreats and outings this year, including a fall hiking trip and the regional Cross-Roads Retreat, held this past year at the University of Richmond. Hampden-Sydney also served as host to the IVCF winter semi-formal this year, which was held jointly with members from both Longwood and Sweet Briar.

CLUBS AND ORGANIZATIONS

Jongleurs

The dramatic club at Hampden-Sydney spent this past year overseeing, in collaboration with the College's Fine Arts department, the production of True West, Largo Desolato, numerous small productions, and the ancient greek play Oedipus Rex. The club involved many members of both the Hampden-Sydney and Longwood College communities. By drawing in large numbers of students (with 36 active members) and by drawing in sizable audiences to club-sponsored productions (nearly 500 students at the Oedipus Rex play, for example) the club has managed to help draw attention to Hampden-Sydney's excellent theatre activities.

Madisonian Society

Once again this year, the Madisonian Society focused on the Model United Nations as its primary activity. The students Hampden-Sydney sent to various conferences (at Georgetown, University of Pennsylvania, and the Nationals) came back with numerous individual awards. At the Georgetown Conference, Hampden-Sydney beat out students from over 50 other schools on the Atlantic Coast (including most of the Ivy League) to win the Outstanding Delegation award. H-SC also attended the National Model U.N. conference, with over 2000 delegates representing schools nationwide, in New York.

College Republicans

This past year, the Hampden-Sydney College Republican Society has participated in numerous events and has had one of its most successful semesters in recent history. Our activities have ranged from assisting candidates in the Farmville area with their campaigns to helping legislators in Washington.

The College Republican Society, along with fellow GOPers from Virginia Tech and Virginia Commonwealth University, visited Washington, D.C. this past year, an activity that we hope might someday become a tradition. The group toured the Capitol, had a private tour of the Republican House cloak room as well as the House floor itself, sat in on various congressional hearings, and dined at the prestigious (and predominantly Republican) Capitol Hill Club with staffers from North Carolina Congressman David Funderburk's office.

The Society also sponsored the candidacy of Todd T. Reid for Chairman of the College Republican Confederation of Virginia (CRFV), in which he is currently serving as 7th Congressional District Representative. HSC junior Marshall T. Manson is currently serving as Executive Director for the CRFV, and Society Chairman David Blocker was appointed Representative of the 5th Congressional District. The Hampden-Sydney College Republican Society sent 26 of its members to the CRFV convention in Richmond, making it one of the largest and most active groups in attendance.

In March, the College Republicans held a campaign workshop for fellow CRs from across the Commonwealth. High-level campaign and administrative staffers from the Allen administration, as well as various political consultants, discussed past and future campaign styles and tactics.

To close out the spring semester, the CRs held a dinner and a lecture with Ed McMullen '86, a Hampden-Sydney graduate who is serving as the director of Senator Phil Gramm's presidential campaign for South Carolina.

Philosophy Club

The Philosophy Club had a hyperactive year, inviting five visiting professors to speak at Hampden-Sydney, participating in four joint philosophical dinners and debates with students from Randolph-Macon Woman's College, and attending two lectures at UVA. All of these events attracted high student interest, and after every lecture held on campus the Club also sponsored receptions and dinners for Hampden-Sydney faculty, students, and the speaker.

In October, the club invited Prof. Berys Gaut, of the University of St. Andrews, to lecture on cinematic realism. In November, Prof. Jerry Walls of Asbury Theological Seminary gave a lecture on heaven and hell which was sponsored by the club. In the second semester Dr. Victoria Voytko (of John Carroll University) defended the Platonic position in favor of censorship. Prof. Cora Diamond spoke here in March, discussing the nature of truth, and Prof. U.T. Place spoke here in April, discussing consciousness.

In both semesters the H-SC philosophy club, in conjunction with the R-MWC philosophy club, held joint dinners and discussions: one at H-SC and the other at R-MWC.

Baptist Student Union

The 18 members of the Baptist Student Union participated in numerous activities this year that provided them the opportunity to integrate their social and religious lives. They have maintained a consistent schedule of Bible studies, and dinners for all of their members; and they have welcomed Longwood Baptists to these meetings as well as attending Longwood meetings themselves.

The BSU also sent students to the Virginia State Baptist conference in Lynchburg this year. They also acted in cooperation with the Longwood BSU to sponsor a Christian Concert in Crawley Forum for the benefit of the community.

Circle K

The members of the Circle K participated in a variety of public service activities this year, from adopting a highway to adopting a grandparent. They built support for the Hampden-Sydney blood drive. They also collected and moved food for the disadvantaged of Farmville throughout the year.

Bicycle Club

The campus bicycling club, open to students of all abilities, aims to help those who are just getting involved in sport riding as well as those who are interested in competing. The club sponsored weekly training rides during the Fall and the Spring, and participated in a ride sponsoring the Longwood Center for the Visual Arts. We also served as sponsors for an April Fool's mountain bike ride, open to all students and faculty.

The Student Environmental Action Coalition continued working this year towards its goal of raising environmental awareness. The club has kept active by holding conferences and running the campus recycling program.

This year the SEAC was the Virginia coordinator for the National organization, and hosted the Virginia State SEAC conference—an event which drew students from 14 other colleges. They also ran the Green House on campus (an environmentally-friendly dormitory) and the recycling program.

Sydistic Hampsters

The 1994-95 school year saw the premiere performance of the Sydistic Hampsters, H-SC's comedy improv troupe. With a cast of eight, the Hampsters staged two shows, the second being the long-missed Parting Shots which parodied everyone it could, students included.

Though the Hampsters will be losing a considerable number of members to graduation next year, it is hoped that they will be able to attract new members to carry on their legacy of humor.

THE HAMPDEN-SYDNEY football Tigers finished an otherwise disappointing campaign on an extremely high note following their convincing 24-10 victory over arch-rival Randolph-Macon in the season finale. H-SC made up for a season of frustration by completely dominating the Yellow jackets in the 100th game of the Oldest Small College Rivalry in the South.

The Tigers opened the season with losses in four of their first five games, but rebounded to post victories in three of their final five contests. Despite completing the 1994 season at 4-6 overall, their first losing season since 1981, the Tigers posted a 3-2 mark in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference and tied with Guilford and Randolph-Macon for second place in the league. The Tigers have finished among the top three teams in the ODAC in each of head coach Joe Bush's nine seasons at the helm.

The Tigers opened the 1994 campaign with a pair of road games against Muhlenberg and Clinch Valley. The Muhlenberg Mules played an inspired game in their first contest under the direction of new head coach Greg Olejack. The Tigers dominated the game statistically, but were unable to put points on the board in dropping a 26-9 decision. Sophomore receiver Preston Montague tied a H-SC school record with 10 receptions for 148 yards in the game.

The following week the Tigers traveled to Wise to face NAIA Clinch Valley. The Highland Cavaliers combined a potent offense with a strong defense to defeat the Tigers. Senior Robert Thompson enjoyed a solid performance for H-SC on the afternoon as he rushed for 131 yards and two touchdowns. Reserve quarterback Reuben Burton saw his first significant action for H-SC and completed 9 of 14 passes for 100 yards.

ODAC FOE Guilford College was H-SC's first home opponent of the season and the large Parents Day crowd were treated to an excellent football game. Guilford broke a 14-14 tie with a field goal in the final seconds of the first half and led 24-14 late in the game when H-SC reduced the margin to three on a touchdown pass from Kemp Smith to Jody Cohen. However, the Tigers were unsuccessful on the subsequent onside kick attempt and Guilford ran out the clock in a 24-21 victory over H-SC. Hampden-Sydney linebacker Mark Hazelwood enjoyed an outstanding game with 15 tackles and an interception.

H-SC earned their first victory of the season by defeating Bridgewater College 21-3. The Tigers completely controlled the contest as they held Bridgewater to only 101 total yards. Robert Thompson posted his fourth straight 100 yard game as he rushed for 123 yards and a touchdown. Kemp Smith also had an excellent day as he passed for 138 yards and two scores.

Regionally ranked Emory & Henry was the Homecoming guest of H-SC and the two teams put together an entertaining performance. E&H opened a 28-7 advantage in the third quarter before H-SC rallied to cut the lead to 28-17 early in the final period. The Tigers had several chances to score late in the game, but were unable to penetrate the tough Wasp defense. E&H added a late touchdown to defeat H-SC 35-17. Smith passed for 228 yards and Mark Hazelwood recorded 18 tackles in the game.

A dominating running attack and outstanding special team play were the primary keys to H-SC's 21-17 victory over Washington & Lee. Punt Returner Brent Rusnak returned a punt for a touchdown and Kemp Smith and Wes Dearing both scored on touchdown runs for the Tigers. Smith enjoyed a solid day with 79 yards rushing and 113 yards passing. The H-SC defense played without injured standouts Mark Hazelwood and Scott McFalls, but their replacements enjoyed strong games. Freshman Brian Shelton recorded eight tackles in his first start and junior Ali Al-Eyd had 11 tackles and an interception.

The Tigers struggled to one of their poorest performances of the season against an excellent Catholic University squad. The Cardinals led 15-0 at halftime and went on to defeat H-SC 29-6. The Tigers were limited to 247 total yards while Catholic gained 376. Wes Dearing led the Tiger attack with 66 yards, including a 49-yard touchdown run. Adam Jones led the H-SC defense with 9 tackles, including three for loss.

In a defensive struggle, the Tigers defeated Davidson 12-7 despite being limited to a season low 207 total yards. H-SC trailed 7-6 late in the third quarter when Robert Thompson scored on a 2-yard touchdown run. Thompson finished the contest with 81 yards rushing. The Tiger defense limited Davidson to only 65 yards rushing and stopped the Wildcats on four straight plays after Davidson had driven to the Tiger 11 yard line in the final minutes of the game.

In their final tuneup before facing Randolph-Macon, the Tigers let one get away against Methodist College. H-SC scored a pair of touchdowns on long scoring bombs from Reuben Burton in the first two minutes of the third period to assume a 20-10 lead over the Monarchs. However, the Tigers could not hold the advantage as Methodist scored on a pair of long passes to pull out a 24-20 victory. H-SC had numerous scoring chances in the final period, but were unable to get the ball into the end zone. Burton passed for 189 yards and two touchdowns, but also threw two costly interceptions late in the game.

LOOKING TO SALVAGE a disappointing campaign, the Tigers played their most complete game of the season in dominating rival Randolph-Macon. H-SC controlled the game on the ground as they out gained R-MC 274 to 91 running the football. R-MC led 3-0 entering the second period before the Tigers exploded with three quick touchdowns. Quarterback Kemp Smith scored on a seven yard run and senior back Wes Dearing scored on a 52-yard pass from Smith and on a 66-yard run as H-SC scored 21 points in a span of four and a half minutes. The Tiger defense took care of the rest as they limited Randolph-Macon to only 237 total yards and sacked Macon quarterback Andy Bush seven times. Dearing finished the game with a career-high 147 yards rushing while Robert Thompson added 130 yards on the ground. The Tigers dedicated their inspired effort to senior defensive lineman and team captain James Carter. Carter was injured in a car accident following the Methodist contest and was in Southside Community Hospital as the Tigers faced R-MC. Several Tiger players taped Carter's number (96) on their helmets and the game ball was presented to him following the victory.

With his 130 yard effort against Randolph-Macon, Robert Thompson became the ninth player in Hampden-Sydney school history to pass the 2,000 yard career rushing mark. Thompson rushed for a team leading 914 yards on the season and completed his career with 2,043 yards rushing.

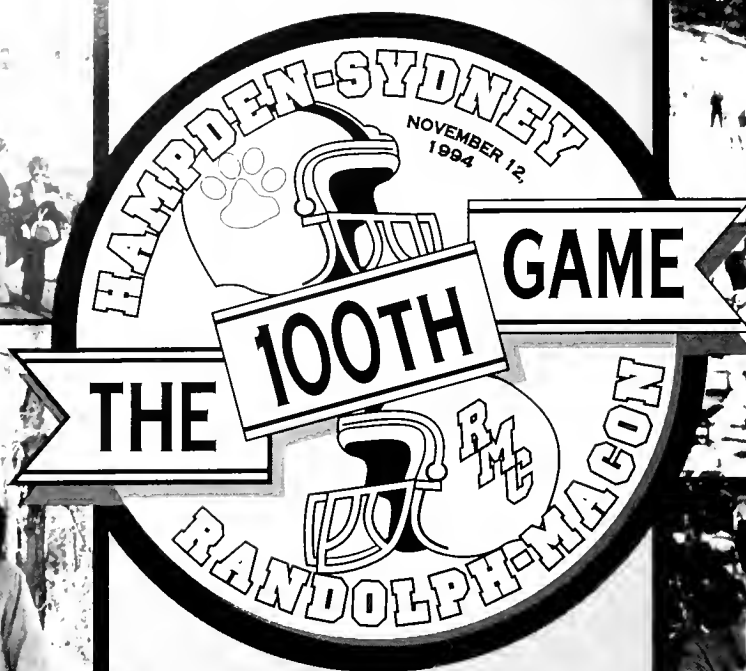

SEVERAL TIGER PLAYERS were recognized following the season as members of the All-ODAC squad. Five players earned first team honors while three players were named to the second team and one received honorable mention designation. Named to the first team were offensive lineman Matt Kerry, center Brian Taylor, right end Jody Cohen, running back Robert Thompson and defensive lineman Chad Wheeling. Kerry and Wheeling received first team distinction for the second straight year while Cohen had been a second team pick a year ago. Receiver Preston Montague, defensive end Scott McFalls and defensive back Brent Rusnak were picked as second team selections. Linebacker Mark Hazelwood received honorable mention recognition.

DR. RAY MOORE, SR. (Class of 1900) used to say, "We can't pray for victory over Macon. But we can pray for the best team to win. And we know who that is." A number of H-SC prayers were answered as the football teams of Hampden-Sydney and Randolph-Macon met for the 100th time on Saturday, November 12, in a contest attended by thousands and taped for later television broadcast.

The Tigers amazed friends, foes, and fans by scoring three touchdowns against Randolph-Macon in the first half and going on to win 24-10. Some attribute the Tiger strength to the team's rallying for James Carter, the popular defensive tackle severely injured in an automobile accident the week before. At any rate, the Hampden-Sydney Boys could do no wrong in the 100th Game.

Although the festive atmosphere was clouded slightly by the post-game clash between some feverish fans and officers of public safety—despite which the north goal post ended up in Chalgrove Lake as a gratifying (if expensive) display of school spirit—The Game showed how the Hampden-Sydney community can come together to defeat an enemy, even a metaphorical one.

Long after the arguments about the goal post's dunking had abated, the issue was revived, at least for a moment: listed among the donations to December's Christmas Mother Fund of Richmond was a gift "In memory of the north goal post on Fulton Field at Hampden-Sydney College," in the amount of $24.10.

Above: While battling an onslaught of pepper spray, H-SC fans liberate the north goalpost following the Randolph-Macon game. The goalpost later found a home in Chalgrove Lake. Opposite (clockwise, beginning at bottom left): Maconites came in droves, via James River Charter buses. Meeting of the mascots during the Ball Run. A few of the 14,437 fans in attendance. Meeting of the team captains at the beginning of The Game. H-SC fans show their support for the Tigers. What would The Game be without The Tailgates?

THE MAGIC CARPET RIDE ended 45 minutes too soon for the 1994 Hampden-Sydney soccer team. After the finest season in school history, the Tigers found themselves tied with defending champion Roanoke College at halftime of their ODAC championship game and within reach of the first conference title in the 26 year history of soccer at the College. However, instead of claiming the final jewel in a special season, the tired legs of the Tiger players suddenly failed them as Roanoke scored a pair of goals to defeat Hampden-Sydney 2-0 and sneak away with their second straight conference title.

Despite the disappointing loss, it was a season to remember for the Tiger soccer squad. H-SC posted a school record 15 victories, including nine shutouts and reached the finals of the ODAC tournament for the first time ever. H-SC also spent much of the season ranked in the region and emerged as the eighth ranked team in the South, the first time they had ever been ranked at the close of a campaign. With their semifinal victory over Randolph-Macon, Michael Reilly also became H-SC's all-time winningest soccer coach with 52 victories.

Three Tiger players—forward Joe Holder, midfielder Jason Buckner, and back Curtis Player—earned first team All-ODAC honors, which marked the first time the Tigers had ever placed three players on the all-conference first team.

15-4-1, RANKED SECOND IN ODAC

A PRESEASON PICK as the top team in the South and the favorite to win the ODAC championship, the Tigers did not disappoint. Led by a strong senior class, the Tigers opened the campaign with 7 straight victories; they later had winning streaks of 8 and 13 games. H-SC was ranked first in the South Region all season; nationally, the Tigers ranked as high as seventh.

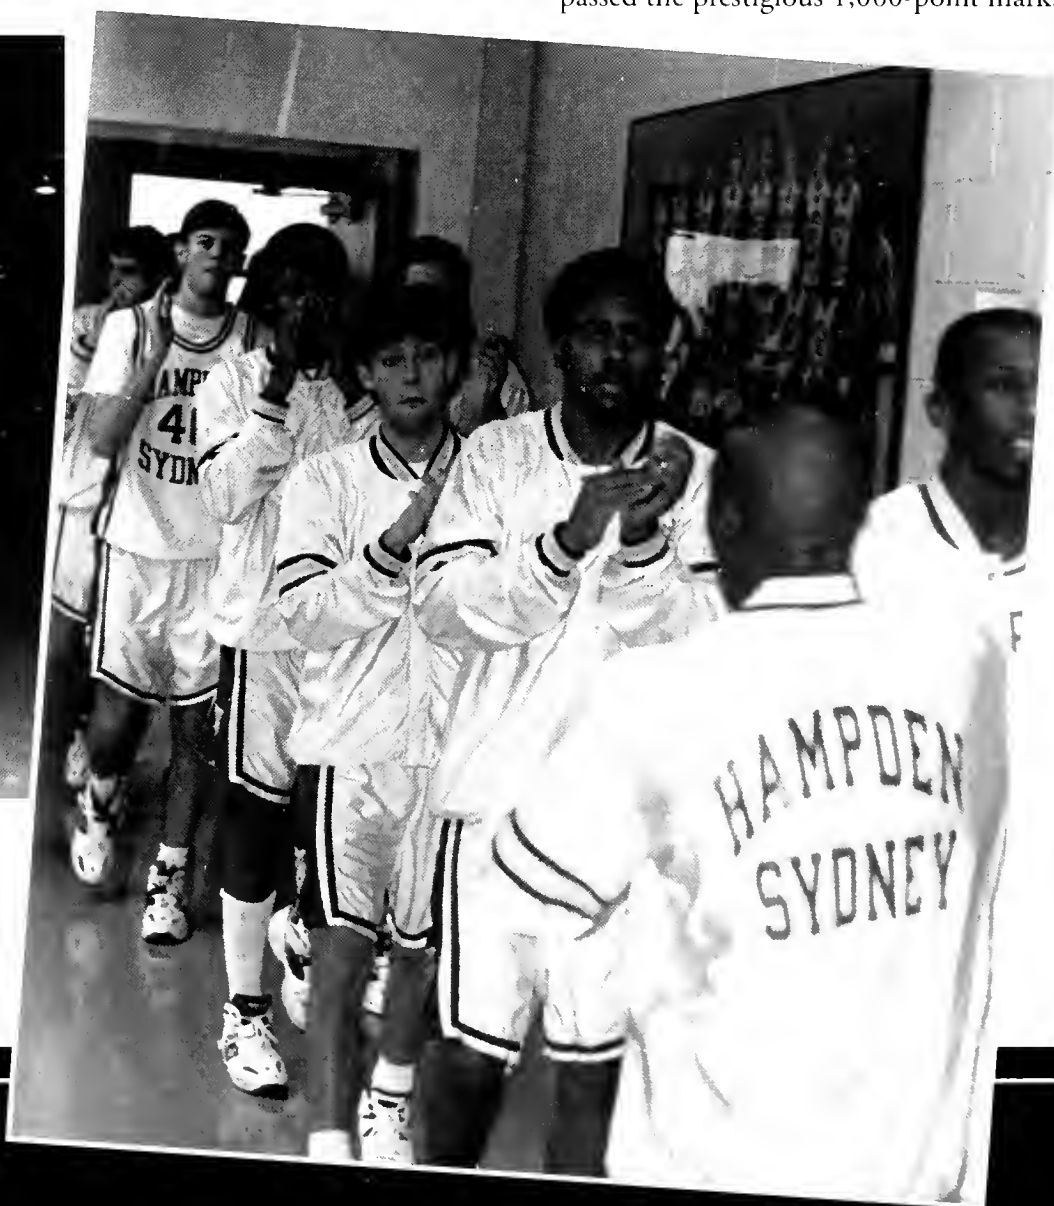

Despite a strong schedule, the Tigers breezed through the regular season, on their way to a 28-3 overall record, with a 17-1 mark in the conference—matching the highest single-season total in ODAC history. Icing on the cake was the perfect 9-0 mark on the road, including overtime victories at Emory and Henry, Bridgewater, and Virginia Wesleyan.

AFTER POSTING the finest regular season in Hampden-Sydney basketball history, the Tigers continued their success in the post season. H-SC defeated Washington and Lee, Emory and Henry, and Roanoke to claim their third ODAC championship since 1989. The championship also assured the Tigers the number-one seeding in the South—which in turn assured that the first four games of the NCAA tournament would be played in Fleet Gymnasium. The Tigers made the most of their home court advantage with convincing victories in the opening three games, advancing to the Elite Eight and falling only to Wisconsin-Platteville, the eventual national champions, to end the finest basketball season in school history.

Individual milestones were also part of the 1994-95 Tiger basketball season. Since arriving at H-SC in 1986, head coach Tony Shaver has brought a tremendous level of excitement and success to the Tiger Basketball program. During the season, he became the winningest coach in the 84-year history of basketball at the College and now has 167 career victories. Three members of the Tiger squad—Nate Schwab, Jason Leonard, and Todd Kerr—also secured a place in Tiger basketball lore as they passed the prestigious 1,000-point mark.

BASKETBALL

28-3, RANKED FIRST IN ODAC, NCAA DIVISION III ELITE EIGHT

TIGER BASKETBALL: ON THE

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY made their third trip to the NCAA's "Sweet 16" in the last four years with a pair of convincing victories over Dixie conference opponents in the first two rounds of the tournament. Nate Schwab scored 26 points and Jason Leonard added 16 points and 10 rebounds as the Tigers held a potent Christopher Newport squad in check for a 78-71 victory.

The second round of the tournament proved to be one of the best performances of the season by H-SC as they completely dismantled the excellent Greensboro team. Jason Leonard scored a career-high 31 points, Todd Kerr had 25 points and Nate Schwab added 22 points and 10 rebounds as the Tigers broke open a close game with a dominant second half in a 105-79 victory.

The Tigers continued their role as an NCAA Tournament host in the South-West Sectional of the Tournament. On the opening evening, Hampden-Sydney faced Nebraska Wesleyan while Millsaps College played Wisconsin-Platteville.

In front of a paid crowd of 1,550 enthusiastic fans, the Tigers rallied from a seven point second half deficit by outscoring Nebraska Wesleyan by 19 points in the second half for a 77-65 victory. Todd Kerr led the Tigers with 21 points while Ryan Odom added 15 on five three-point baskets.

WITH A TRIP to the Division III "Final Four" on the line, the Tigers hosted Wisconsin-Platteville in front of another raucous crowd. H-SC stayed close to the eventual national champions for most of the first half, but the visitors eventually took advantage of Tiger foul trouble to seize a 14 point halftime advantage. H-SC tried to rally in the second half, but Wisconsin-Platteville answered every Tiger run on their way to a 99-85 victory.

While the most successful season in H-SC school history ended with a loss, the final game did little to tarnish the most successful season in Tiger basketball history. In addition to claiming the ODAC championship and a school record of 28 victories, the 1994-95 Hampden-Sydney Tigers displayed a work ethic and team enthusiasm that will long be the legacy of this talented squad.

THE YOUNG Hampden-Sydney baseball squad completed the 1995 season with a busy week that included a pair of ODAC victories. H-SC held off a late W&L rally to defeat the Generals and also came from behind to defeat Emory & Henry in dramatic fashion in the second game of a doubleheader.

After dropping a one run decision to W&L in the conclusion of a game originally started at W&L in March, the Tigers used a five run second inning to defeat the Generals. First baseman Bryan Adams drove home three runs and freshman Jason Keefer knocked in a pair of runs to pace the offensive attack.

After dropping a tough game to Division II Longwood, the Tigers faced Emory & Henry in the final ODAC games of the season. E&H needed to win both games to secure a spot in the ODAC Tournament. The Wasps won the opener as H-SC's only offensive burst was a three run home run by Adams.

In the second game, H-SC spotted the Wasps a 5-1 lead before scoring four runs in the fourth inning to tie the score. E&H then pulled ahead 11-8 entering the seventh inning. The Tigers cut the lead to one run on an RBI hit by Mark Hazelwood and a bases loaded walk to David Ball. The bases were still loaded for junior Jason Ferguson and the shortstop singled home the tying and winning runs to lift H-SC to victory.

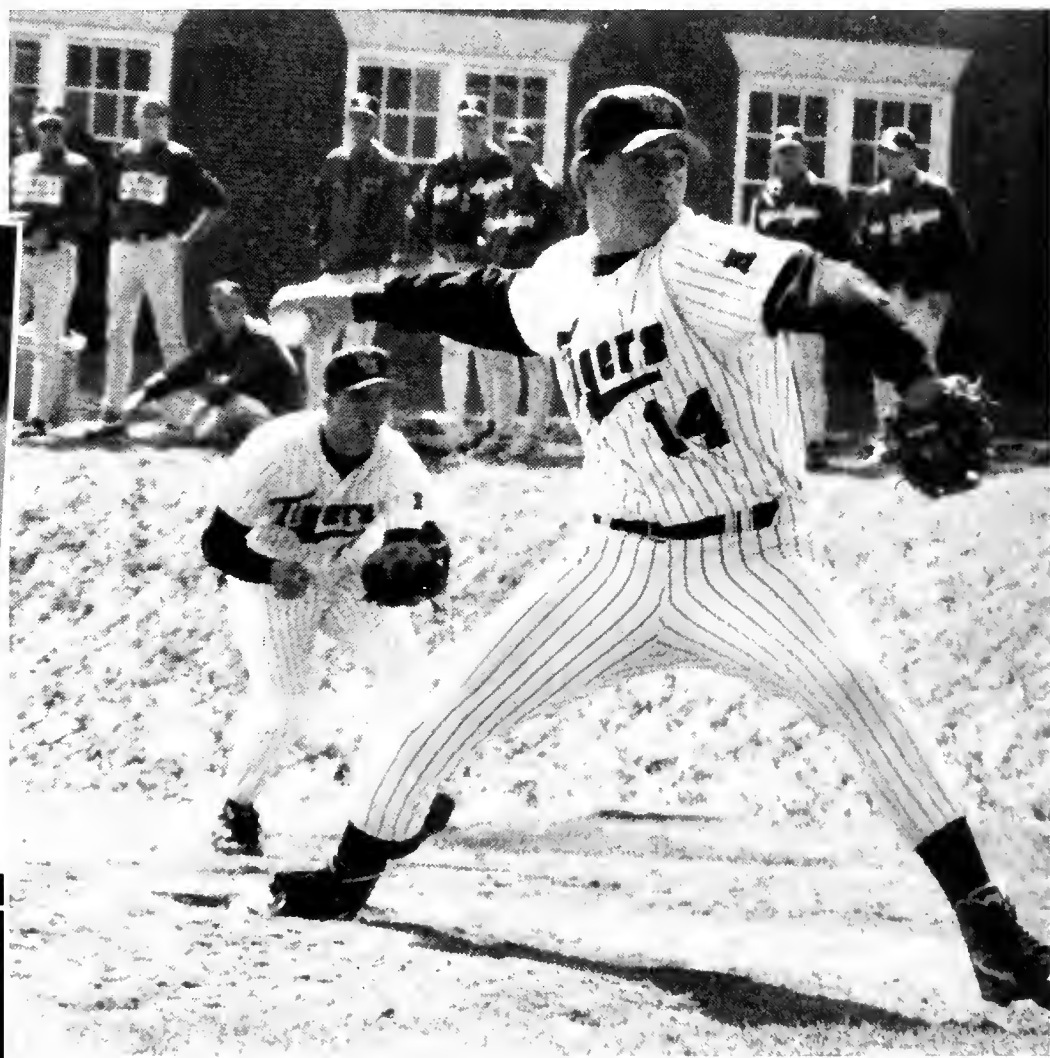

The Tigers concluded the season against Ferrum College in a game that greatly mirrored the season for the Tigers. H-SC again fell just short as they made a dramatic rally, but were unable to make enough crucial plays to earn the victory.

Ferrum jumped to an 8-0 lead before senior hurler Neal Butt entered the game and shut the door. Ferrum managed only one hit over the final four innings as the Tigers mounted their rally.

H-SC scored a single run in the fifth inning as Gary Walton reached on an error and scored on a single by Kemp Smith. The Tigers added five runs in the eighth inning with Walton providing the big blow with his first career grand slam home run. Unfortunately, the Tigers were unable to continue the rally in the ninth inning as they dropped their eighth game of the season by four or fewer runs.

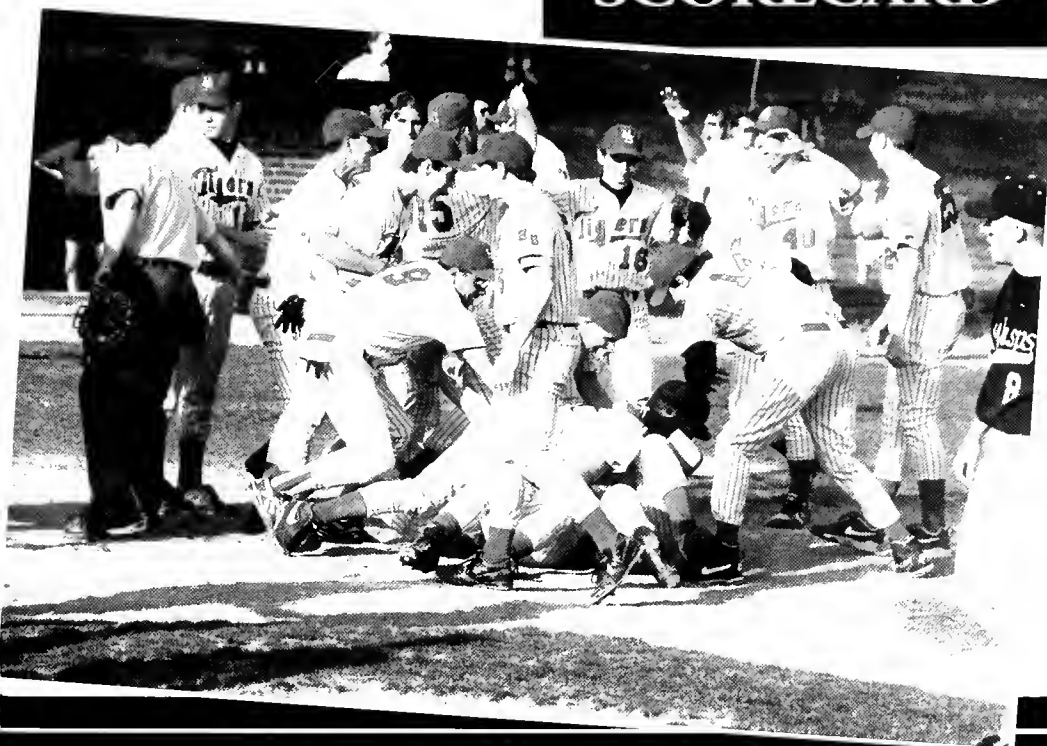

Junior Mark Hazelwood was the top performer for H-SC this season as he led the Tigers with a .408 batting average, 25 runs batted in, and 28 runs scored. Freshman Jason Keefer also enjoyed an outstanding season with a .317 batting average and 21 RBIs.

UNDER THE DIRECTION of head coach Ray Rostan and led by hard-working seniors, the Tiger lacrosse team enjoyed its finest season since 1989. H-SC claimed victories in 9 of the final 10 games, to post a 10-4 regular season mark; their only loss during the stretch was a 10-9 decision to second-ranked Gettysburg. Also, H-SC's four losses in the season were all against teams ranked in the top six in Division III at the time, including the top three squads. As a result of their superb season, the Tigers earned their share of the ODAC Championship, tying for the title with Roanoke and Washington and Lee. H-SC came very close to earning the title outright; all that stood in their way was their 7-6 overtime squeaker loss to W&L early in the season.

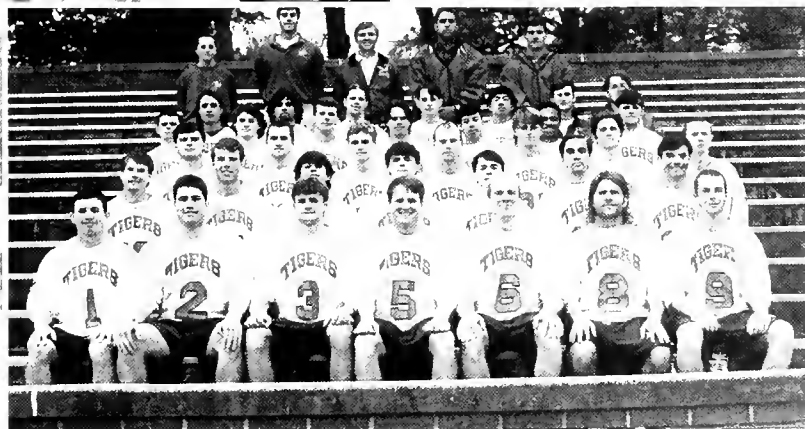

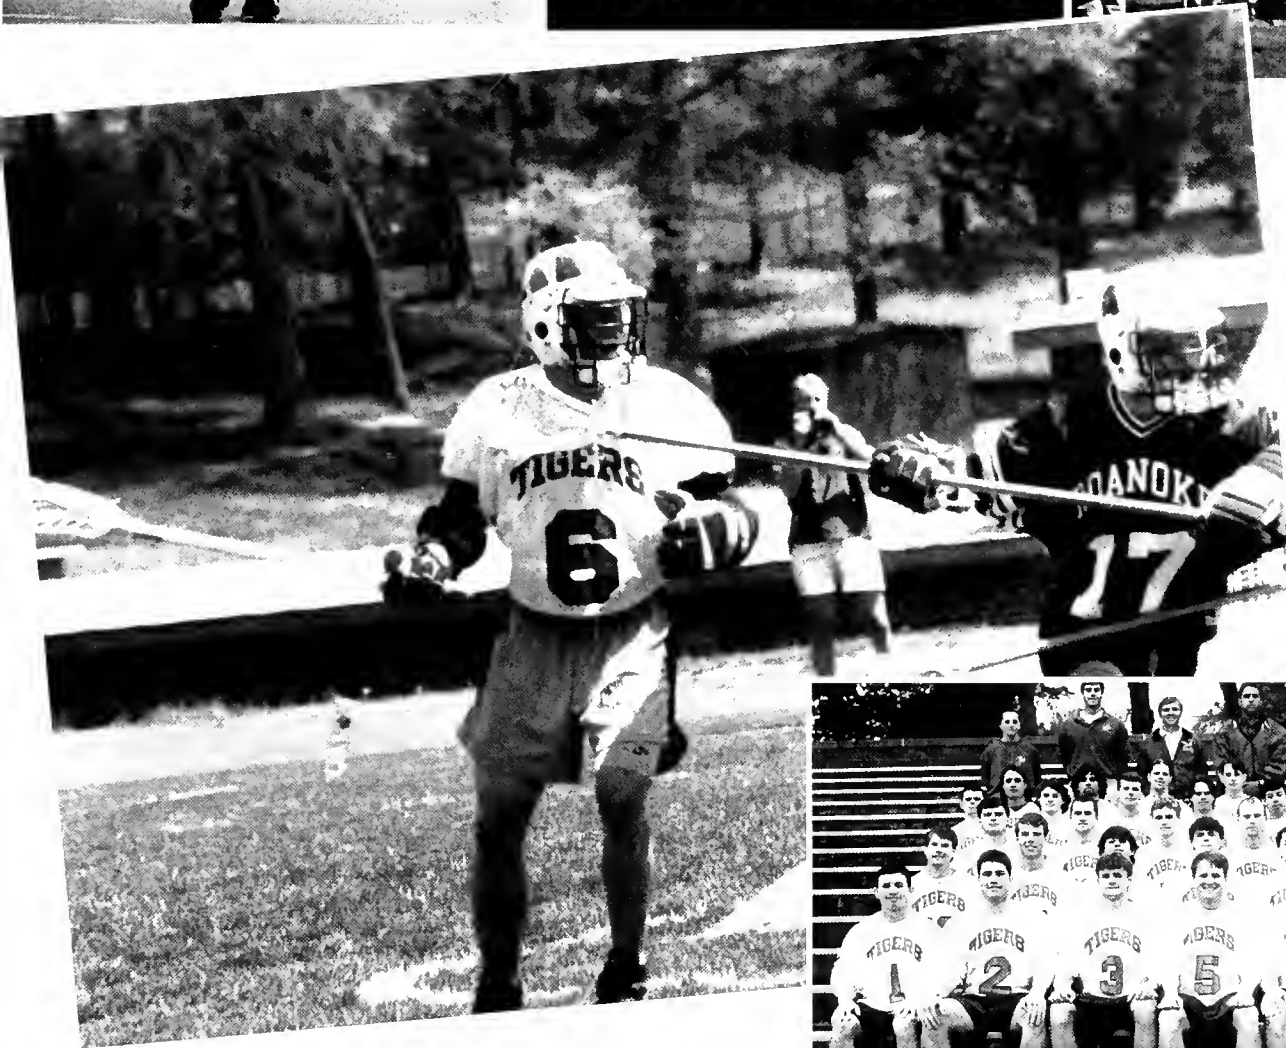

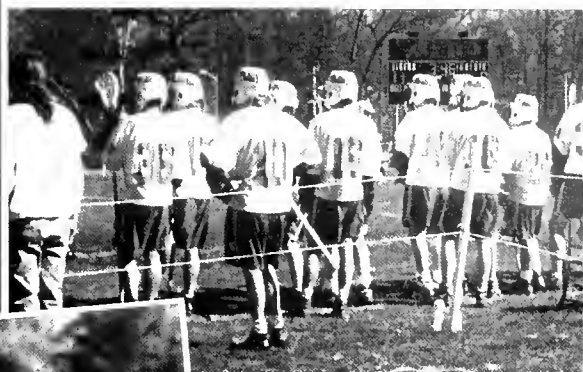

Senior attackman Ed Curry was the top offensive standout for the Tigers as he led H-SC in scoring and moved to third on the career scoring list. Curry was honored as ODAC "Player of the Year" and was a third team All-America selection. Senior midfielder Chris Bissinger was the top faceoff performer in the ODAC and earned first team All-ODAC and second team All-America honors.

UNDER THE DIRECTION of first-year head coach Dee Vick, the Hampden-Sydney cross country squad posted their best finish in the ODAC tournament since 1990. The Tigers placed fourth overall and finished ahead of defending ODAC champion Lynchburg College. During the season, the Tigers placed ahead of Lynchburg three times, the first time in 11 years the Tigers had placed ahead of the Hornets in cross country competition. In dual match races, the Tigers finished with a solid 6-4 team record.

Leading the H-SC squad throughout the season was junior standout Bruce Stephens. Stephens led the Tigers in every meet in which he ran in '94 and finished 13th overall at the ODAC Championships with a time of 28:52.

Sophomore Nathan McKenney also enjoyed a solid season for the Tigers. After battling injuries, McKenney recovered to finish 18th in the ODAC Tournament with a time of 30:01. Senior Jarratt Ramsey was also a solid performer for the Tigers and he finished close behind McKenney at the Tournament with a time of 30:09.

H-SC's other regular runners, freshman John Green, sophomore John Neuner, and junior Ryan Henry all showed potential during the season and should prove to be key performers as the Tigers look to move further up in conference standings in 1995.

FOR THE TENNIS TEAM, the 1995 season was business as usual. The squad posted a perfect 12-0 regular season record for their second straight perfect season. H-SC has now claimed 25 straight regular season dual-match victories, including two straight wins over conference power Washington and Lee. In the ODAC conference tournament, H-SC missed the overall title, but garnered three individual championships; first-year performers Brett Eckley and Ryan Gravender claimed single titles while Eckley and Will Bryan won number two doubles.
